

The echo of the past war.

The Great Patriotic War affected every person who lived in our country. Millions of people went to the front to defend our Fatherland with weapons in their hands. Others worked for days at factories, making everything necessary for war. They didn't leave the factory for several weeks, they forgot about rest and sleep. The first performed a combat feat, and the second - labor. This year, our country will celebrate the 75th anniversary of the victory in this terrible and bloody war. And every year there is fewer and fewer living witnesses of military exploits and labor heroism of the people in that difficult time for our country. And only memory will live forever, and remind of events that should never happen again.

I would like to tell about my relative Anatoly Ivanovich Pylnov. Anatoly Ivanovich was called up in June 1941. First he was sent to Zagorsk, then to the Far East, but after a while he was wounded and sent home. In 1943, Anatoly Ivanovich volunteered for the front, participated in the liberation of Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Hungary. He went through the whole war and in 1945 returned to his hometown.
